1 Introduction

This statement describes the steps which Allford Hall Monaghan Morris¹ (AHMM) has taken during the last financial year, ending March 2021, to ensure that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in any part of the practice, or in any of our supply chains.

The statement illustrates our commitment to conducting business with honesty and integrity, acting ethically in all our business relationships, treating all people with dignity and respect, and complying with all applicable laws, regulations, treaties and codes.

2 Our Organisation

We are a leading architectural practice providing a full range of architectural services across a comprehensive range of building sectors, including conservation, health, office and residential for clients in the UK and abroad.

We take a pro-active approach to sustainability in the design of our buildings as well as our operations, which reflects the need to address the social, environmental and economic impact arising from these activities.

AHMM's UK-based company operates from offices in both London and Bristol, while our US-based company (LLC) has its office in Oklahoma City. The Group directly employs over 450 people across its three offices – the larger proportion being based in our head office in London.

Our supply chains fall into two main categories; professional consultancies providing design and other services on a sub-consulting basis, throughout the architectural design process; and various suppliers of goods and services which support our operations as a business.

3 Our commitment

AHMM does not tolerate slavery or human trafficking and strives to put in place and maintain systems and processes to ensure it does not take place in our work, our operations or our supply chain.

We are an RIBA Chartered Practice and maintain high levels of honesty, competency and professionalism in all of our dealings, in adherence to the RIBA Code of Practice and in compliance with all applicable laws, regulations, treaties and codes of practice in force from time to time.

4 Working Practices, Policies and Procedures

Our working practices and our policies and procedures, including Anti-Corruption and Bribery, Equal Opportunities, Disciplinary and Grievance and Anti-Harassment Bullying, reflect our commitment to fair employment practices, all of which are underpinned by our Corporate Responsibility Policy, which was first published in December 2020.

To ensure that salaries are paid on a fair and comparable basis we carry out benchmarking across our offices and also externally.

Our working culture does not promote excessive working hours, and we monitor any overtime worked on a regular basis, recognising this when appropriate by offering TOIL (time off in lieu).

AHMM is an accredited Living Wage Employer and does not offer unpaid internships.

5 Due Diligence

Though we consider ourselves at extremely low risk of any form of modern slavery or trafficking, largely because of our lack of direct involvement in building activities, our due diligence is regularly examined, and refreshed where necessary, to continue to identify and eliminate any risks to workers in our supply chains.

As part of our efforts to monitor and reduce the risk of slavery and human trafficking within our practice and supply chains we have a new piece of software in place, which includes a comprehensive questionnaire for our suppliers to answer. This is run through a proprietary procurement application, which improves the checking and monitoring of our supply chain, ensuring that among other things:

- Employment is freely chosen – no forced labour or human trafficking is practised.
- Working hours are not excessive and a fair wage is paid.
- Child labour or other exploitative, cruel or degrading practices are not tolerated.
- No discrimination is practised.

Our in-house Legal & Appointments team is responsible for reading and checking contracts, statements, policies, as well as terms and conditions for not only our architectural projects, but for all other suppliers, contractors and any persons or company providing a service to AHMM as part of our commitment to establishing, assessing and eliminating areas of potential risks of slavery and human trafficking in our business and supply chains.

6 Supply Chain Relationships

With regards to adhering to values and ethics, AHMM expects our suppliers to have natural respect for our ethical standards in the context of their own culture.

We specifically expect our suppliers to extend the principle of fair and honest dealings, which we have with them, to all others with whom they do business, including employees, sub-contractors and other third parties. An example of this would be the requirement of our contracted cleaning personnel to be paid the London Living Wage.

The longevity of our practice has enabled us to establish relationships with reputable external consultants and other suppliers, who are aware of and adhere to our required standards and the measures we have in place. And, just like all of our suppliers, they are still subject to due diligence and vetting.

7 Statement

This statement is made in accordance with the Act², and constitutes AHMM's anti-slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year commencing April 2020 and ending March 2021. This statement has been approved by our Board of Directors, available for staff to access through our intranet and is published on our website – www.ahmm.co.uk.
